BAU values collaboration as a means of fostering innovation and creativity. Members of BAU have the opportunity to work alongside one another, share ideas, and collaborate on projects. Whether it's staging a group exhibition or organizing a public art project, BAU Gallery provides a platform to connect and collaborate with fellow artists and the community.

Beacon Room, “Transmission”, Robyn Ellenbogen

Robyn Ellenbogen exhibits a series of bamboo slip books and handmade paper shields. Bamboo slip books were an early form of book making in China prior to the invention of paper. Ellenbogen made paper during the pandemic, exploring new areas of form and deepening her engagement with nature. Ingredients such as seeds, flowers and the incidental markings of the path of beetles are transmitted throughout the work.

Robyn Ellenbogen is an ordained Buddhist priest and multi-media artist working in metalpoint, animation, installation, textiles and artist books.

On Sunday, July 23rd from 1-3, Robyn Ellenbogen will offer a free workshop to make a communal bamboo slip book.
